

Latest Parkers newsletter opens a can of worms

THE SPEAKER LOSES HIS VOICE

The latest edition of the Parkers newsletter is about to arrive on your doormat (or you can pick up a copy at your local branch). Not only does it feature a wide cross section of our products but we've also added our own tongue-in-cheek commentary on the big talking point of the day: Michael Martin's resignation as Speaker of the House of Commons.

Whilst we all struggle on in the face of economic adversity our representatives at Westminster have managed to besmirch the good name of the Mother of all Democracies. While we've been tightening our belts, cancelling holidays and watching our house prices plummet, these beacons of decorum have been installing duck houses, having moats cleaned and of course claiming money for non existent mortgages.

Thankfully we don't have to worry about the demise of our local MPs because, in their case, early retirement brings with it a comfortable pension together with probable elevation to the Lords or, better still, the ultimate terminus on the route of the Gravy Train ... Brussels. Poor things !
