RAINWATER HARVESTING SOLUTIONS AT PARKERS

With climate change now reality rather than speculation, the demand on water resources has increased by some degree, whilst the amount of water available for supply has gone down. That's why parkers have embraced WPL's range of bespoke environmental solutions for sewage and trade effluent treatment, and rainwater harvesting.

Forthcoming regulatory changes will mean that over 90% of UK homes will have their water usage metered, making consumers more and more aware of how expensive "common or garden" water has become.

From a simple, above ground water butt to below ground storage tanks and comprehensive, automatic recycling systems, WPL's range of rainwater harvesting products provide versatile, economic and ecological solutions and give consumers the ability to freely collect water and use it with out feeling guilty; on their plants and lawns, for washing their cars, in their washing machines and in their toilets.

WPL's RainRetain range is fully compliant with European regulations and is simple to handle, install, use and maintain, making it ideal for DIY and selfbuild and appropriate for specification by construction professionals.

The WPL range of below ground rainwater harvesting systems are designed for use the home for replacing up to 50% of normal domestic water use within the home. Typically, the harvested rain can be used in applications including flushing toilets, washing machines and also for use in garden irrigation via a simple external connection.
