

Parker Building Supplies features on 'Restoration Man' TV show

HAILSHAM BRANCH MAKES BIG IMPRESSION ON TV

Parker Building Supplies' Hailsham branch was in the spotlight this week as the TV cameras rolled in order to add footage to a soon-to-be-broadcast episode of Channel 4's 'Restoration Man' series.

PBS were selected as the Builders Merchant on a prestigious project featured in Channel 4's 'Restoration Man' series which returns to the airwaves this month. The idea of the show is that presenter George Clarke, who formerly taught architecture and design at post-graduate level at the School of Architecture and the Built Environment at Nottingham University before TV stardom beckoned, travels Britain discovering forgotten and neglected property orphans, helping their new owners to sympathetically convert them into modern use.

One of the requirements was to source second hand clay roof tiles, hand selected to match the existing tiles. Parkers were called upon to supply high quality Bereco timber windows, and Allutec cast iron guttering and downpipes, similarly selected to be sympathetic to the original building and surrounding areas.

We also supplied rather more contemporary products such as top-of-the-range Fakro Roof Windows featuring electric openers and blinds, plus other essential items such as Quinn-Therm floor, wall and roof insulation.

Lisa Walker, owner of the property which is the focus of the episode in which we are featured, says "Parkers provide a high quality service which includes providing sensible solutions to our problems". High praise indeed !

Be sure to look out for Parkers' Tonbridge branch on a TV near you in the next few weeks !
