

Parker Building Supplies delighted to be rocking on with Tommy

PHOTOGENIC KENNO IMPRESSES TV BLAGGER

Parkers are pleased to be working again with TV's favourite all round handyman Tommy Walsh, famous locally as the 'voice of Parkers' in our successful radio advertising campaign.

*Above: Top TV property and garden renovation expert Tommy Walsh, with building materials supplied by Parkers
Below: Liam Collins at our Tonbridge branch asking Kenno for advice and getting the serious 'chin rub' expression*

When the producers of Tommy's new TV building series 'Fix Your House for Free', airing this autumn on the Discovery Realtime channel, set out to look for a reliable, local supplier of building materials we assumed they were simply keen to take advantage of our huge range of products and our impressively low, credit crunch-busting prices.

The idea of the show is aptly described by its title, but project manager Tommy is not the only man who loves a challenge. Tommy supplies all the recycled building materials for free and, to help him, professional builder, trained sculptor and compulsive scavenger Liam Collins is on hand to occupy the critical role of Blogger-in-Chief.

In actual fact they also wanted to shoot some scenes of Liam at our Hailsham branch, and he was clearly as impressed by our trade counter as by our hard landscaping display areas. He was clearly also impressed by the quality of service he got from our own Kenno, Tonbridge branch's own Blogger-in-Chief.

Tommy and Liam take on structural jobs such as extensions, loft conversions, garden rooms or open plan modernisation. When people are finding that money is tight, there's no better time for them to tackle their biggest project yet, to help lucky families make their home bigger.

PARKER BUILDING SUPPLIES