

Parkers staff dress to impress for Breast Cancer Awareness Month

LOOK WHO'S WEARING IT PINK

researching the cure

This year Parkers staff across our branch network have been more enthusiastic than ever in getting in touch with their feminine side in order to support the Breast Cancer Awareness Wear it Pink day.

The event grows in popularity, year on year, among individuals, companies, hospitals, local authorities, universities and schools the length and breadth of the country and the donations received contribute generously towards the funding of vital breast cancer research.

One woman in every nine is diagnosed with the disease in the UK. Breast Cancer Campaign's mission is to beat breast cancer by funding innovative world-class research to understand how breast cancer develops. This leads to improved diagnosis, treatment, prevention and cure.

Since its launch, the 'Wear it Pink' event has raised in excess of £10 million, enabling Breast Cancer Campaign to support 112 research projects including Dr John Maher's at Kings College in London, which has developed unique ways of treating breast cancer by using the body's own immune system.

Likewise, Dr Ingunn Holen's project at University of Sheffield which studies ways of combining certain existing treatments to see if they can be more effective if applied in specific combinations. Patients receiving breast cancer treatment may, for example, also be given drugs to prevent tumour growth or bone loss.

Thank you to all those who took part and those who contributed, no matter how modest the donation, to this vital cause.
